The Legatum Center (http://legatum.mit.edu) empowers the MIT community to accelerate social and economic progress across the developing world through innovation-driven entrepreneurship (IDE). To realize this mission, the center administers a series of action-oriented activities, including:

- A competitive fellowship program (http://legatum.mit.edu/our-programs/fellowships) for incoming and current MIT students who have demonstrated a commitment to building and scaling impact in the developing world through their entrepreneurial ventures.
- Seed grants (http://legatum.mit.edu/our-programs/grants) for students looking to explore and experience IDE opportunities in the field.
- Research assistantships (http://legatum.mit.edu/our-programs/research-assistantships) for students looking to understand and develop programmatic and policy interventions for “on the ground” system change in the developing world through IDE.
- An annual series of events, including an anchor conference (http://sdvinfo.wix.com/mitsdv) and monthly speaker events, to promote and shape discourse on bottom-up development and system change through IDE.

The Legatum Center is directed by Georgina Campbell, and the faculty director is Professor Fiona Murray. For more information, contact the center (legatum@mit.edu).
