Undergraduate Study

Bachelor of Science in Global Studies and Languages (Course 21G)

Program I in French Studies (<http://catalog.mit.edu/degree-charts/global-studies-languages-course-21g>), Program II in German Studies (<http://catalog.mit.edu/degree-charts/global-studies-languages-course-21g/#germanstudiestext>), and Program III in Spanish Studies (<http://catalog.mit.edu/degree-charts/global-studies-languages-course-21g/#spanishstudiestext>) are designed to provide competence in reading, writing, and speaking; general knowledge of French, German, or Spanish culture and literature; and advanced subjects in literature, film, and cultural studies.

For each option, the student designs a program in consultation with an advisor in order to meet individual interests, abilities, and goals. However, all majors reflect a balance of historical, geographical, cultural, and linguistic competence.

Other Degree Programs

Joint degree programs are offered in French, German, and Spanish, and include majors in combination with a field in engineering or science (21E, 21S). See the Department of Humanities section for further information on joint degree programs (<http://catalog.mit.edu/schools/humanities-arts-social-sciences/humanities/#undergraduatetext>).
